Music is central to cultural life and therefore also often perceived as central to social life. The study of music in society has been of interest to canonic social thinkers, including Weber, Simmel, and Adorno, since the establishment of sociology. The study of music has also concerned scholars in adjacent disciplines, particularly musicology, cultural studies, and economics.

Music Enhances Social Skills. One theory for the emergence of music during human evolution is that it strengthens the bond between people. Sharing a musical experience synchronizes movements, and oscillatory brain activity between the people involved. This may support feelings of empathy, narrowing the gap between individuals.

Daily life and social customs. Although the bonds of the extended family are an important factor in the social norms of Ghanaians as a whole, they tend to be much less pronounced among the urban population, where the trend is toward the nuclear family, especially among the professional classes and scattered immigrant groups. Nevertheless, many urban inhabitants return regularly to their rural ...
